TO VETERANS:

National Service Life Insurance policies held by veterans of World War II have in many instances been allowed to lapse. That this may be remedied the government has extended to the holders of these policies the right of reinstatement without psysical examination. All that is needed to get again for himself and his family protection in the amount of five hundred to ten thousand dollars is for the veteran to make application. This application must be made before August 1st. Apply to your nearest Veterans Administration office.

Phenothiazine Will Kill Nodular Worms

Common Insect of Hogs Present on Most Farms

You've heard so much about swine roundworms that you may think they are the only internal parasites that cause hog losses. If so, you're wrong. You're overlooking the nodular worm.

The USDA says the nodular worm is perhaps the most common worm parasite of swine, and that in some states, practically all hogs raised under ordinary conditions may be infected.

Research workers in animal parasitology are beginning to suspect that nodular worm injury to hogs is far greater than was heretofore believed. Nodular worm infections cause considerable losses to the meat industry because the intestines studded with nodules, resulting from nodular worm injury, are weak and tear easily, and this destroys their value for use as casings. These losses, of course, are passed along to the hog raiser in the form of lower prices.

Hogs entertain four species of nodular worms. The nodular worm gets to be only about a half inch long, hence is not as readily seen as the roundworm, which gets to be as thick as a lead pencil and more than a foot long. Hog raisers seeing roundworms may blame them for trouble caused by the smaller, harder-to-see nodular worms.

Phenothiazine is the only effective remedy for removing nodular worms. It destroys more than 90 per cent of them. Phenothiazine is easily given in feed—in fact, that is the safest way for a hog raiser to administer it.

Easy Method Used For Dipping Pigs

A simple arrangement for dipping pigs at vaccination time, devised by Dr. J. O. Black, Nebraska veterinarian, is shown in accompanying drawing.

One side and end of a 50 gallon drum has been opened at the left. In cutting the drum turn the sharp edges in and down so the pigs will not get injured when getting out. The drum is placed outside the pen where vaccination is to be done.

After each pig is vaccinated, it is dropped over the fence and into the drum on its back. The pig will turn over in the drum and jump out and drum will be ready for the next pig.

GIBSON, James Thurman

In loving memory of our darling son and brother, James Thurman Gibson who passed away 3 years ago today, July 17, 1944.

We miss you more astime passes on
Than we did on the day of your going.
Your absence never closed the door
of our hearts,
And the lamp of our love is still glowing.
We miss the sound of your footsteps
And your voice since you have gone
And the we no longer see you,
In our heart you still live on,
Why did you go when life was so young and beautiful,
And the dark clouds were near
To dim the brightness of our lives,
And start the bitter tears.
We thought not at the close of day,
When nite failed earth and sky
That one so full of life and hope
Could not say goodbye.
We have only your memory, dear Jimmie,
To remember our world life through
But the sweetness will linger forever,
As we treasure the image of you.
—Loving Brothers, Charlie and Billy, and Mom and Dad.

Install Device in Lightning Study

Bolt-Funneling Device Put Atop Empire State.

NEW YORK—Inside the conical cap atop the Empire State building General Electric technicians tugged and pushed into position a new device to record the characteristics of lightning bolts.

Previous studies involving the world's tallest "lightning rod" have shown that about 80 per cent of the lightning bolts "hitting" the tower actually originate in the steel frame of the building and soar skyward.

By continuing these war-interrupted studies, General Electric company's engineers hope to learn enough about the characteristics of lightning so that equipment can be designed against interference and damage during storms.

Once the new recording device has been installed, a technician will sit in front of the great box-like phonographic instrument atop the building. The abnormally heavy lightning bolts will funnel through the apparatus in front of him. He will be safe, the technicians say, unless he touches two of the girders simultaneously or sticks his hand out of the trap door at the top of the cone.

The peak of the Empire State building is not the most peaceful place in town during an electric storm. The electrical field of the earth is projected abnormally far into the sky by the tower and the metallic cone on its summit hisses continuously as it pours a stream of static electricity into the air. If one should stick a hand up through the trap door each finger would give off a corona of St. Elmo's fire, engineers say, though no one has ever tried it.

The experiments are suffering momentarily from a housing shortage. The scientists want an office in a building nearby facing the tower, so they can mount a camera in a window to record the bolts as they strike. This would provide information on speed and direction of flow of the bolts.

In the course of the work, begun in 1935 under Dr. Karl B. McEachron and continuing under J. H. Hagenguth, it was found that the tower was struck as many as nine times in 20 minutes.

Necktie Swapping Swamps Inventor, He Screams Uncle

SEATTLE. — Bill Horsley, president of the one-man International Necktie exchange here, is screaming "uncle."

Horsley, founder of the exchange, idly mentioned to a local newspaper reporter that his agency exchanges neckties. His hobby is designed so that men who get tired of their ties can exchange them for the cost of postage.

Horsley's idea got widespread publicity and the former University of Washington cheer leader says he is going crazy with cravats. He has been receiving hundreds daily.

The exchange has been temporarily suspended until the mad Horsley catches up with back orders.
